The first article appeared "in substance" in Protection and Export, January, 1922; the second, "in substance" in the Empire Citizen, January, 1922.

Miller, Elva E. Town and Country. Chapel Hill, University of North Carolina Press, 1928. 212 p. (University of North Carolina Social Study Series).

An editorial review of this book is given in Wallaces' Farmer 55 (25) June 22, 1928: 4.

The author was editor-in-chief of the Southern Agriculturist for some years before his death. He realized that the farm was as much affected as the factory and the city in foreign policies, development of flood control, natural resources, taxation, transportation, the tariff, and other problems. See the editorial on E. E. Miller, under the title, To Make A Rural Civilization, in Wallaces' Farmer 52 (45) November 11, 1927: 5.
